David Learmount is the operations and safety editor at Flight International and flightglobal.com.

He has been an aviation journalist for 30 years specialising in human factors, man-machine interface and training as they relate to aviation safety, and for all that time has been responsible for producing the magazine's annual global accident reviews which are considered one of the most authoritative regular assessments of aviation safety standards worldwide.

Before becoming a journalist he was a C-130 Hercules pilot and qualified flying instructor in the RAF, but he already held a current private pilots licence when he joined the Service.

David is widely consulted by the international broadcasting media whenever aviation is in the news.
